

I believe in fair speech, but I also believe in fair play. If the media cannot regulate itself in regard to fair play, then maybe they need to be regulated, the question becomes who gets to decide what is fair play.

Although I deplore the decision by Sinclair, I also feel they should be required to prominently display before and during the program that "it is a partisan point of view and does not explore discenting views".

It is really a testament to the sorry state of the media in this country that a group of discredited people can continue to distort, and does not have to worry about any of our vaunted news agencies from calling them on it.
